Hi Officer Carter,

This is Somjit Barat, who had requested help this evening on getting hit by a deer. I am sorry I, my wife Sharmistha and my son Shounak did not get to say thank you for your courteousness, professionalism and prompt response when I needed it. But that's because, frankly speaking, I was traumatized! Thank you for being there all along, and thank you for keeping us safe.

I am still in shock from the incident and this is the first time it happened to me in my almost 26 years of driving! And I wonder why an innocent animal has to lose its life because of us...human beings! Wish you all the best!

Subject: Thank you to your officers

Good Afternoon, Chief Jolley

I'm a local who lives in Julian who wound up getting stuck in the mess of traffic yesterday during the snow storm. I wanted to convey my gratitude to the officer who helped me out near Gray's Woods at the bottom of Skytop Mountain yesterday. The officer gave my vehicle a long push which allowed me to make it back to Atherton Street and stay at a hotel last night. I'm grateful for his help and kindness. Please extend my thanks to all of those who helped us out yesterday.

Thank you,

Eric.

Citizen's Police Academy

If you think you know police work, you might want to think again... Is it like CSI, NCIS, or Bosch? Nope. Or kind of... If you can imagine a one-hour episode spread out over months or even years, you might be more accurate.

Evening one of the Centre County Citizen's Police Academy, a group of ten arrived and were greeted by friendly police staff at the Beaver Stadium Police Station where they ushered us in, and we sat at tables covered with actual crime scene photos. We were hosted by Dean Woodring, State College Police Community Relations and Crime Prevention Officer who introduced us to the program and the local chiefs of police. I was surprised and impressed by how friendly and funny these officers were. I immediately felt safe asking questions and participating in the evening's activities.

The program is an 8-week learning opportunity for local citizens interested in learning more about how our police forces work. I imagine there are multiple goals for the program – to educate, to evangelize, and to recruit. While this used to be an opportunity for senior citizens, they have broadened to include all age groups. Most of us fell into the first group, but there were two young women who looked like they might be exploring career opportunities.

Night one included introductions and then a CSI overview. We toured the Ferguson Township Emergency Response vehicle which has equipment to secure and search a crime scene including photographing, fingerprinting and capturing footprints and tire tracks. I was impressed by the sturdiness of the vehicle. It is like a tank which protects valuable equipment and personnel who may need to plan and prepare or just stay warm! We then got the chance to lift and capture fingerprints off a variety of surfaces – wood, metal handles, paper, glass, etc. We learned that it is not as easy as you would think. And even if there is a perfect fingerprint, it cannot be matched to the perpetrator unless that person has their fingerprints on file. And matching can take time. Depending on the level of the crime, it can take a few weeks to months. This is the real speed of police investigation.

Night two, oh my! This was the night to get our adrenaline pumping. Imagine a TV car chase – lights blazing and sirens blaring with hair raising turns. We were treated to rides with well-trained officers through the training course. Each of us took turns riding in the passenger seat of both a police sedan and SUV as the drivers took each hairpin curve with aplomb and skill. Tightly placed orange cones marked the courses and none of the drivers hit a single one. We learned about the training that police officers have to prepare for safe high-speed driving, which includes tight turns and controlled stops. We also learned that while they are trained for high speeds, they typically do not have to use it. We witnessed a motorcycle officer run the course as well. In this case, they are so well trained that they can pace themselves to move at a pedestrian speed and used for safety and security at events and can go places the cars cannot. By the way, those cool knee-high boots they wear are not for style but to keep their legs from getting burned by the engine heat.

Again, this evening, I was moved by the warmth of the officers and their willingness to volunteer their time to meet with our group of ten community members. They were funny, fun, and open to sharing their stories of how they got into law enforcement. And while each of their stories are different, they work as a team.

Night three was sobering. No pun intended, but the topics were Driving under the Influence (DUI) and "Use of Force" in policing. I left feeling the weight of responsibility these officers have in their jobs. It takes the type of personality that can manage anger and aggression as well as the willingness to be physical when the situation requires it. De-escalation has become a buzz word with recent national stories about police violence. But we learned that calming a situation is always the first response to dangerous situations. It takes calm and understanding to work with an agitated or aggressive offender.

The officer who presented information about DUI is expertly trained in drug and alcohol identification and certified as a "Drug Recognition Expert." He was handsome in his neatly pressed uniform with an earphone and protective gear looking like he came from central casting and not someone to mess with. Within minutes we saw his humanity and sense of humor. While this is not a funny topic, he presented it in a way that made us laugh through the seriousness of it. He and another former detective walked us through how they identify drivers who are impaired and the several tools they have to let the driver "prove" they are not. I am not certain I could "walk the line" if pulled over due to nerves. But they have other ways to assess drunkenness or drug impairment. We learned that Saturday and Sundays are the deadliest days, but that the overall numbers in our area have decreased a bit. They think this is due to ride sharing and COVID.

We then moved on to use of force. This was by far the more sensitive of the topics. Instead of running through their prepared presentation, they asked for questions. There were broad questions about how they know what is needed and the speed at which they sometimes have to react. They have extensive training in running through scenarios. But nothing prepares them like being on the job. My classmate then asked about implicit bias knowing this was a difficult, but critical issue. She had examples of past bad experiences that were genuinely concerning. The officer was familiar with implicit bias testing and training. His background is in mental health, and he was patient and not at all defensive. But my classmate pushed on this and reminded us that a few hours of training are no substitute for experience. He agreed and there was discussion about the temperament required to be a good police officer. I was moved by his patience and understanding. He shared that while they are only human, they strive to lessen the force in all situations because it is the right thing to do. But at the end of the day, they do not want the paperwork, the risk of losing their jobs, and the burden of doing harm. They just want to come home safely to their families at the end of each shift.

This week, we had a double-header. While the shooting experience was optional on a Saturday, most of the group participated. Of us, about half had never shot a gun before. We met at the Outdoor Sportsman's Club which is located on top of the mountain outside of Bellefonte. And on a crisp autumn morning, the drive was spectacular. We were met by three officers who are all highly skilled and trained shooting instructors. They supplied a very thorough safety overview and introduction to the weapons that are standard in State College police cars. The message, "we are responsible for every bullet that comes out of our guns," was repeated several times. This underscored why the State College police do more than the required annual training. It is also why they use the phrase "shoot to stop the threat" rather than "shoot to kill." If they use their guns, they are responsible no matter the outcome. Therefore, making an accurate shot is important to ensure the safety of the lives or property - anything other than the threat.

We each had a chance to shoot seventeen rounds from a Glock pistol. The instructors stood by us as we were seven yards away from the target. The first shot was a huge surprise for me. While there was not a lot of physical kick back, it was LOUD! Despite the ear plugs and covers, the sound surprised me. But from there on, it was empowering to shoot and hit the target repeatedly. When I got up for the second round, I was more prepared and enjoyed learning more nuances to shooting accurately. While I cannot imagine ever owning a gun, it is important to respect them and to know how to use it if ever faced with having to use one.

The following Monday night we heard from a mental health liaison and a Lieutenant trained in hostage negotiations about Crisis Intervention Teams (CIT). The increase in mental health crises has resulted in police officers serving as first responders to most calls. The Crisis Intervention Team approach can improve the outcomes of these encounters by reducing arrests of people with mental illness and improving the chances of them getting help. They shared statistics about the increase of mental health calls both locally and nationally. The suicide rate alone was staggering. All State College police, and many of the surrounding community police and front-line responders have taken part in a week-long training that enables them to identify mental illness more accurately; learn tactics to de-escalate situations; and fully understand the options for emergency and long-term care for these individuals. This is such a serious and all-consuming topic. I was both saddened by the statistics but encouraged that the police and first responders are getting training to manage these complicated situations as well as learn self-care. One can only imagine the stress that our police force faces in their day-to-day jobs. While it is their chosen profession, each day is different. Adding the complex layer of mental health crises, has only made it more demanding. Learning that the police force has peer support trained in mental health is heartening.

Knowing that our kids are safe in schools and fans at Beaver Stadium football games are protected by highly skilled teams is comforting. Members from each of local police department are part of a police tactical unit that uses specialized weapons and tactics (or SWAT). They use both lethal and non-lethal methods depending on the situation. We met at the Ferguson Township police station where we were introduced to a guy who is best described as "Kindergarten Cop." He is strong, imposing, and standing behind a table of lethal weapons. While he is expertly trained as a sniper, he is also the school resource officer for some of the local elementary schools. There is no doubt that he is qualified and would not hesitate to run immediately into a threat situation. But he was also quick witted and funny and answered our wide-ranging questions about his work. He is truly the guy you want protecting our kids.

After being introduced to the lethal and non-lethal weapons and when they would be appropriate, we were allowed to examine and hold them. While they make a battering ram look easy to use on TV, it is heavy and unwieldy. I am glad they are well prepared to use them correctly! They then showed us how they clear a building. They work physically close together – hand on shoulders- and protect each other at all times. In addition to formal training, they sometimes get to use local buildings that are about to be demolished to practice their skills. When asked why they chose this specialty within policing, they admitted that they are all a bit looney and love breaking things. So, exercises where they can destroy walls, doors, and windows in old buildings, is just plain fun. Fun aside, they are very serious when called to an incident involving barricaded suspects, hostage rescues, or active shooters; crowd control; and other situations requiring resources beyond the capacity of the patrol division.

Evening six of the Citizen's Police Academy brought a number of things to light. Key was the fact that the date collided with an event at Penn State that required every available officer to be present on the campus. It was truly all hands-on deck across the county including the State Police. While we were safely in Bellefonte at the Sheriff's office and the 911 Center, it was difficult not to wonder what was happening at home in State College. Were the officers we have come to know safe? Was the situation under control? I could tell by the demeanor of our host that he was concerned as well.

We started the night at the Sheriff's office. Their offices are in the former county prison with bars intact. They are right behind the County Courthouse, so a portion of the building is still used to house prisoners before a court hearing. They let us cram the group into one small holding cell just to see if we could do it – like when groups used to crowd into a phone booth – except these had hard built-in cots, steel toilets, cameras everywhere, and heavy doors to lock you in! Most interesting is that the Sheriff is actually an elected position. Sheriff Sampsel is a family man who cares deeply about his community. He is generous with his time educating Eagle Scouts and other youth groups. He also has to pay for things like election flyers from his own pocket. I am not clear why this is so vs leadership in law enforcement organizations.

We then headed to the Centre County 911 Emergency Communications Center. They are the primary contact for anyone in Centre County's 35 municipalities needing police, ambulance and/or fire assistance. It truly looked like something out of Star Trek. The technology was astounding. Each of the eight desks had at least eight monitors flashing. They are using the latest state-of-the-art radio, telephone, and mapping systems. While we were listening to the manager talk about the systems, it was hard not to be distracted by the calls and video coming from State College. I wish we could have focused on that to learn more about what they were doing. Looking at the screens without context was difficult. And given the current police situation at Penn State with rioters, it was hard not to be concerned. But they truly have one of the most important jobs – ensuring that they listen carefully, respect the caller, understand the situation and triage appropriately. Without them, the teams could not do their work.

This week events were like a final exam week for all the systems and specialties we have been learning about. A Penn State white out football game, the homecoming parade, and riots on campus utilized everybody's skills and expertise.

Look up! If you are at a football game in Beaver stadium or at a parade in downtown State College, know that drones are protecting you. Drones with high-capacity cameras are able to scout the crowds looking for threats. I, for one, am grateful to know that we have the technology to keep us safe. On this final night of formal learning, we also heard about the bomb squads, which are highly trained people and robots able to hunt and eradicate bombs. This might apply to a suspicious package or backpack. But it might also come in handy for outdated explosives that someone finds on their property.

Finally, we spent our last hour of learning together focused on CPR and other first aid tactics. I have seen AEDs, but never understood or witnessed how they are used. It inspired me to check out where in my office building the AEDs are located and what to do if we ever need it.

I am grateful that our police officers are trained in First Aid. This is just one more way they are prepared to help their citizens.

In summary, our citizens academy cohort was diverse - from those who were retired to those working in the service industry, higher education, engineering, security, and secondary education. The entire group was fully engaged in every session and asked good questions throughout. We all learned a lot and there was a lot of interest in continuing the program into the future for others who want to learn.

I understand how much time and resources each of the officers put into the program. Dean, Shelly and Michelle were always present and wonderful to get to know. But every officer and staff person we met was terrific and eager to share information about their chosen career and specialty.

My 17-year-old son is focused on a career in the military with an interest in helping people and studying psychology and history. I have shared this chronicle with him with the hopes that he might consider a career with the State College police. From what I have learned over the last 10 weeks, his skills and interests would match those of the officers we have met. Our police force is focused on helping people and our community. They need and want to understand people and knowing a bit about history always helps with perspective. I am choosy about what I want for my son and never dreamed that participating in the Citizens Police Academy would result in wanting my son to be a part of it.

Regardless of whether or not he chooses a career in law enforcement, I want him to know that the work is not like a TV show. There is a lot of paperwork. No day is the same. It is a challenging job where you make a difference. The officers that we met along the way are enthusiastic about their work and dedicated to their communities, and I will look back in appreciation for their time and dedication and for opening my eyes and heart to what they do.

Thank you!
Jenny Seller Miska
